DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

1. The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall contain a written description of the invention, and of the manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same and shall set forth the best mode contemplated by the inventor of carrying out his invention.

2. Claims 1-6 remain rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as containing subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to enable one skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and/or use the invention. See the prior Office action for the basis of the rejection.

Response to argument

At page 2 of the response filed 09 February 2001, hereinafter the response, it is stated:

While the minimum electrical requirements to achieve this result may vary depending on such things as the purity of the preparation, G-C base content, ionic strength of the buffer, and other variables the office Action identifies, there is no evidence of record (including in Carrico '313 patent) that the skilled artisan having benefit of applicant' disclosure would have any difficulty in identifying parameters suitable to achieve the claimed result. (Emphasis in the original)

The above argument, while directed to the rejection of claims 1 and 4 is similarly repeated for claims 2 and 5, has been fully considered and has not been found persuasive towards the withdrawal of the rejection. As noted at page 5 of the prior Office Action, the decision of the court in Genentech v. Novo Nordisk A/S USPQ2d 1001:

While every aspect of a generic claim certainly need not have been carried out by an inventor, or exemplified in the specification, reasonable detail must be provided in order to enable members of the public to understand and carry out the invention. "It is true . . . that a specification need not disclose what is well known in the art. See, e.g., Hybritech, Inc. v. Monoclonal Antibodies, Inc., 802 F.2d

Art Unit: 1655

1367, 1385, 231 USPQ 81, 94 (Fed. Cir. 1986). However, that general, oft-repeated statement is merely a rule of supplementation, not a substitute for a basic enabling disclosure. It means that the omission of minor details does not cause a specification to fail to meet the enablement requirement. However, when there is no disclosure of any specific starting material or any of the conditions under which a process can be carried out, undue experimentation is required; there is a failure to meet the enablement requirement that cannot be rectified by asserting that all the disclosure related to the process is within the skill of the art. It is the specification, not the knowledge of one skill in the art, that must supply the novel aspects of an invention in order to constitute adequate enablement. This specification provides only a starting point, a direction for further research. (Emphasis added)

The subject specification, as noted in the prior Office action, does not provide any working examples nor any specific conditions under which the claimed method can be practiced.

Accordingly, the specification has not been found to satisfy the enablement requirement under 35 USC 112, first paragraph.

Conclusion

3. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
